ACADEMIC PROGRAMS AVAILABLE AT UC DAVIS

UC Davis has four undergraduate colleges: Agricultural and Environmental Sciences (CAES), Biological Sciences, Engineering and Letters and Science (L&S); a graduate studies division; and professional schools in education, law, management, medicine, and veterinary medicine. Undergraduate major and graduate programs in CAES and L&S are organized into six divisions: Agricultural Sciences (CAES), Environmental Sciences (CAES), Human Sciences (CAES), Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies (L&S), Math and Physical Sciences (L&S) and Social Sciences (L&S).

HOW TO APPLY

- Visit admissions.ucdavis.edu to review undergraduate admission requirements. If you are currently attending a community college, ask whether or not it has a Transfer Admission Guarantee (TAG) with UC Davis.
- Meet or talk with an adviser to explore or declare an academic major.
- Complete and file an application by the deadline. Describe any special circumstances in your application essay.
- Obtain and file applications for financial aid and scholarships by the specified deadlines.
- Communicate with the department or graduate group for specific requirements of your prospective program.
- Take the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) or Graduate Management Aptitude Test (GMAT), if required by your program.
- Obtain an "Application for Graduate Admission and Fellowship" from Graduate Studies. Review all requirements and file a completed application by the specified deadline.
